

Autumn Quarter 2016 – GWSS 590

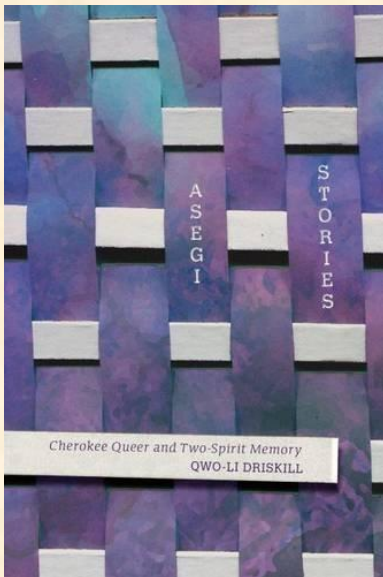

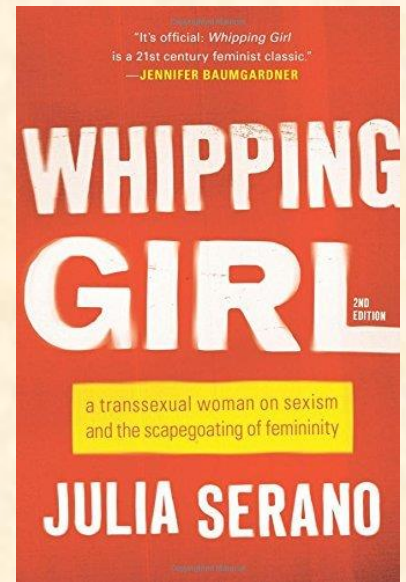

Advanced Transgender Studies

Taught by Professor Amanda Swarr

Tuesdays 3:30-7:20

Thomson Hall (THO) Room 217

In the past twenty years, Transgender Studies has emerged as an important field of inquiry and focus of activism.

This graduate class will explore what the category “transgender” enables and obscures on a global scale, engaging with important ideas including trans misogyny, decolonality/settler colonialism, and heteronormativity.

Graduate students from all fields are welcome to enroll, and no prior study is required, though deep engagement with the course materials will be expected.
